DIVIDED CONGRESS & WH CAN PASS PRODUCTIVE AGENDA IF SHARE CREDIT: BOB WEINER IN USA TODAY, WH & CONG VETERAN

WEINER ANNOUNCES OPEDS RANKED H1, 2, 3 BY OPED NEWS

WEINER LAYS OUT 12 AREAS CONGRESS COULD ADDRESS IN FEATURE USA TODAY ARTICLE

(WASHINGTON, DC) -- Robert Weiner reports that a feature article November 3 in USA TODAY authored by him and policy analyst Emmbrooke Flather asserts that a divided congress and the White House can pass a productive agenda if all sides are willing to share credit, and Weiner lays out areas that can occur. Weiner was a spokesman in the Clinton and Bush White Houses and was a committee chief of staff, director of communications/spokesman, and staff for a number of top officials including Cong. Claude Pepper, Ed Koch, John Conyers, Charles Rangel, Sen. Ted Kennedy, and 4-Star Gen./Drug Czar Barry McCaffrey.

Weiner and Flather laid out twelve areas congress could address: no shutdowns, ICE with strings, ACA subsidies, minimize tariffs, Iran war funding and negotiations, Child tax credit, drug policy, the Southern border, vaccines, AI guardrails, Social Security, and ethics reforms but not Trump impeachment reform.

Weiner announced that his team's articles have been named H1, 2, and 3 -- the highest citations-- by Oped News.

Other recent articles include a piece October 31 in OpEdNews by Weiner and Brenna Sculthorpe urging Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, to stand by his Indiana values and defend the midterm elections from any meddling with the results. The authors contend Roberts would raise the respect for the court as a legacv that will last longer than the current administration. . The article was ranked H2.

Weiner and Jaylen Hill co-authored a piece October 31 in OpEd News demonstrating how Trump's efforts to build structures honoring himself is contrary to religious values in the Bible and embodied by American heroes like Billy Graham. The article was ranked H1.

Weiner and Khel Gordhan co-authored an article November 1` laying out how the 2024 Chicago Democratic National Convention delegates had asked when "Trump fatigue" would come, and assert that the midterm elections are showing the answer is now.

Robert Weiner was also interviewed by the London Times on October 14th for his insight into the midterm elections. There, he discussed the odds of a Democrat controlled Senate and Trump's plummeting poll numbers.
